Graf Zeppelin Is Well On Way Over On Second Trip

Reported West of Gibraltar and Traveling At High Speed.

WEATHER IS FINE

Expect To Reach Mooring Mast At Lakehurst Sunday.

(By the Associated Press)
UNDATED, Graf Zeppelin—Holding to a straight line as nearly as possible, the Graf Zeppelin is hitting a rapid clip across the Atlantic today in her second trip to the United States.
At 7:30 a. m. E. S. T. she reported to the radio station at Casa Blanca, Morocco, that she was 400 miles off Gibraltar.
The course being followed would indicate the dirigible is to hit the Azores but it was not known whether it would go over or skirt the edge of the northwestern coast.
The latest previous report was at 10 o'clock this morning when she was sighted 265 miles west of Gibraltar. Weather conditions were reported "good" and the ship was making an estimated 65 to 70 miles per hour.
The Zeppelin encountered strong head winds over France and part of the Mediterranean, but as soon as they reached the Atlantic began to pick up speed, which was in accordance with the plans of Dr. Eckener, pilot.

Joint Rail and Highway Bridge

Engineer In St. Louis To Discuss Plans With Railroad.

LITTLE ROCK, Aug. 2.—(AP)—Chas. D. Christian, chief engineer of the state highway commission, is in St. Louis today in conference with officials of the St. L. & S. W. railroad as to the cooperation of a railway company with the commission in construction of a joint rail and highway bridge over the White river at Clarendon.
The commission plans to construct a highway bridge and the railroad is said to be considering replacing its rail bridge. The conference was sought to work out an agreement whereby the cost of the bridge would be divided between the railroad company and the state.

He Took Too Much to Granted; Too Bad

Another case of taking too much for granted is reported from Wappinger's Falls, N. Y. Oscar Widmer had been annoyed by petting couples parking near his home, so on a dark night he slipped up to a parked car and crowned the driver with a stick. The victim was not a petter, but an old friend who had stopped to chat with a neighbor. Widmer is held under $1,000 bond on a charge of assault.
The court hasn't passed on the case yet, but he will not be again found taking anything for granted. He looks.

Over-Crowding Is Cause of Outbreak

Warden Says Too Many Men and Too Little Work Is Cause.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2. (AP)—The Department of Justice announced today that a report had been received in Washington from Warden Thomas B. White who said the riot in Leavenworth prison was due to the over crowded condition of the prison and lack of work for the prisoners.
White's report was submitted to the department by J. Stanford Bates, superintendent of federal prisons, who also made a report of his own, praising White for his handling of the situation. Bates' report added that Leavenworth was too crowded.

Moonshine Money Is Newest Farm Relief, Paper Alleges

Arkansas Dispatch to New York World Paints Colorful Picture of Garland City—With the Mortgage, the Old Homestead and Sister Nell.

EDITORIAL NOTE:—An illuminating and interesting story regarding bootlegging and liquor selling in South Arkansas, particularly referring to activities in Miller county, appeared in the New York World of Sunday, July 28, being given front page prominence and under a three-line four-bank head. The story was under a Little Rock date line and was three columns in length.
The Star is giving part of the long story below without comment, leaving the reader to judge whether the situation is faithfully portrayed.

LITTLE ROCK, July 27.—Chivalry as an institution in southwestern Arkansas was given a severe shakeup last week when more than a score of women, ranging in age from a mother of sixty to a stock-inged girl of twenty, were arrested on charges of transporting or possessing liquor and dragged into the courts in Texarkana, border city on the Arkansas-Texas state line.

S. M. Gurley, deputy prohibition administrator for western Arkansas, in commenting on the arrests, said that the activity was only the beginning of a war against corn liquor traffic in Miller county, long known throughout Arkansas, eastern Texas and northern Louisiana as the place of manufacture of "Garland City Pride."

The arrest of women, alleged to be actively engaged in transporting and selling corn whisky, is only one more indication of the real importance of the illicit whisky traffic in the economic structure of this southwestern Arkansas county. Bootlegging here, no less than in the more thickly populated centers of the East has been immensely profitable.

Debts and mortgages on farms have been paid by money received from the sale of a product. Poor cotton years, when money has been tight, have been lived up by the liquor trade, and into Miller county pours a steady stream of ready cash from the surrounding territory and from Miller county pours a no less steady stream of corn whisky.

One would hardly expect Garland City, a hamlet perhaps of a hundred white people, situated on the west bank of Red river, about twenty miles east of Texarkana, as the liquor capital for a large section of the Southwest. Two or three stores are open for business during the day in the town, and these usually are closed a part of the afternoon so the owners can go fishing or hunting.

Provides Farm Relief
At night, after the hard working inhabitants of the place have retired, the town suddenly wakes to life. Slim, speedy roadsters emerge from the swamps to the south, scurry through the dusty streets of the village to the main highway to Texarkana and the west, or are transported across the slowly sliding swiftly down to the ferry slip moving stream on the first leg of a dash to El Dorado, oil capital of the state.

The real business of the day has begun, Miller county wares, contained in jugs, bottles and kegs are being transported to middlemen and foreign money is brought back the next morning, to be lodged in Miller county banks. Later it is withdrawn to loan to needy cotton farmers in return for a first mortgage on the cotton crop, or it may be used to purchase a farm, a store or a herd of pure-bred hogs.

It relieves the credit situation in the community and makes money easier to get for the legitimate purposes, and farmers, although they have never consumed or manufactured a drop of corn liquor, benefit by the returns, and Southwestern Arkansas bootlegging rolls merrily onward, despite repeated attempts to curtail it.
That women are engaged in large number in the bootlegging business is not startling. Rather it is

Lawyer Suicides After Wounding Ward With Pistol

Girl Injured By Accidental Shot, Will Recover Is Report.

PROMINENT CITIZEN

Victim Says "Good-Bye" After Firing Bullet Into Heart.

ELEAZABETHTOWN, Tenn., Aug. 2.—(AP)—John Burnette, 37, prominent Elizabethtown attorney, accidentally seriously wounded his 17-year-old ward, Virginia Armbrist, last night, secured medical attention and then shot and killed himself.

Mrs. Burnette, a bride of three months, told officers that her husband was teaching her to load a pistol when it exploded and wounded the girl who was standing near by.

Burnette ran for a physician, and while the doctor was examining the girl, picked up the pistol, walked out on the front porch and shot himself through the heart. Then he returned to the room where his bride and ward were and told them good-bye and slumped down across a bed. He was dead when they picked him up.

Robison Erects Attractive Sign

Largest In City Is Placed In Front of Popular Establishment.

George W. Robison, as people in this county know, does things in a big way. Witness his recently enlarged mercantile establishment on Second street. Then it will be no surprise to learn the sign he is erecting in front of his place of business is in keeping with the place.

The sign is the largest ever erected here, being 100 feet long by about three feet high. The background is black, the lettering yellow, and it constitutes a decidedly attractive permanent invitation to come in.

Dawes and MacDonald Reach Agreement

LONDON, August 2. (AP)—The Evening Standard said today it was able to announce that Prime Minister MacDonald and Ambassador Dawes had reached a tentative agreement on a formula for the reduction of naval armament.

Drinks Like A Fish; Arrested

WHITEHALL, N. Y., Aug. 2.—Comes now a drunken fish story—the fish, not the fisherman.

Michael Bebo hooked a thirty pound catfish near here (says he), and in its stomach reposed an empty sealed bottle which had contained Canadian rye whiskey. The fish was palpably intoxicated when it was caught, putting up a very feeble fight, Michael declared. Therefore (Bebo's deduction,) the bottle must have yielded to pressure in passing through the fish's digestive organs, releasing the liquor and affording the fish an unintended spree which resulted in its capture.

Peach Harvest Nearing Close

Crop Falls About Third Short of Expected Production.

NASHVILLE, Aug. 2.—The peach harvest for this year is nearing an end, and only 1512 car loads had been shipped from Nashville and Highland to Thursday morning, with probably three hundred more cars to be harvested. The estimate of the crop was 3000 car loads, but dry weather cut the production seriously, the fruit not attaining the regular size for this district.

Of the shipments from the district to Thursday morning, 852 cars were from Nashville and 650 from Highland.

H. C. Wilson reported Thursday that there were approximately 100 car loads yet to be harvested in the Bert Johnson Orchards, and that the shipments will probably continue until Tuesday from that orchard. However, the weather conditions will have much to do with the movement of the balance of the fruit there.

A few orchards in the Nashville section are shipping in a big way yet, but most of the orchards have been stripped.

Some very select fruit has been shipped from the district during the past week, rains the last of last week adding size to the fruit from several of the orchards. The fruit was already of extra fine color and texture, only needing the rain to add size.

Tourists from many sections of the district to watch the harvesting of the crop, but this travel has been reduced a great deal during the past week.

Returns being received for some of the fruit shipped are very satisfactory to the orchardists, and most of them will make a profit despite the unfavorable weather conditions just at the time the harvest began.

George Jessel Is 'Lucky Boy' Star

Comes Sunday In Singing-Talking Production As Benefit.

If you've never heard George Jessel sing "My Mother's Eyes" you haven't heard the best in talking movies by a long shot. He is a star of the legitimate stage, going to the screen only after adroit of the talking picture where his wonderful voice immediately earned him high position.

In "Lucky Boy," coming Sunday to the Saenger as a Legion benefit production, Jessel is at his best. Local Legionnaires are in charge of the attraction, a ticket committee beginning work this morning of placing tickets for the performance.

Two couples wanted Rev. Windsor of Seaford, Del., to unite them in a double wedding, but he noted that one couple had a Maryland license while the other was issued in Delaware. Resourceful, he had all drive to the state line, and with each standing in the appropriate state, and the minister straddling the line, the double splice was made.

Traffic Experts Discuss Cotton Depot for Hope

L. & A., Frisco and Missouri Pacific Represented Here.

TO ATTRACT BUYERS

Carter Johnson Acts for Local Cotton Exchange.

Traffic representatives of Hope's main-line railroads started an all-day session this morning in the office of Carter Johnson, traffic counselor, out of which are expected to come plans for the establishment here of a storage point for cotton in transit.

The proposal, which is advocated by the Hope Cotton Exchange, represented by Mr. Johnson, would allow compress cotton to be shipped into Hope and warehoused here. It would create a vast assembly station for cotton, and would attract many big buyers to Hope again. Pine Bluff, Little Rock and Memphis are asking similar privileges, and it is believed that all will be granted.

At today's meeting the Louisiana & Arkansas Railway is represented by P. A. Key, general freight agent, of Shreveport; the Frisco, by A. C. Redden, assistant general freight agent, of St. Louis; and the Missouri Pacific, by L. A. Suckgauer, assistant general freight agent, also of St. Louis.

Perjury Confession To Free Life Term

KENOSHA, Wis., August 2. (AP)—A confession that she had given false testimony against Albert Eichhorn, in Alma, Wis., in March 1927, which sent him to prison for life, was made public today by private detectives who had secured it from Mrs. Anna Murmough, Eichhorn was convicted of the slaying of Beatrice Aplar, 22. Mrs. Murmough being the principal witness against him.

Grandsire Falls As Youth Shoots

Planning Frog Hunt When Accident Occurs Last Night.

PARAGOULD, Ark., Aug. 2.—(AP)—Coroner Dee McHaney left early today for Okean, in Randolph county, to hold an investigation into the shooting last night of L. B. Long, by his grandson.
The shooting was said to have been an accident and occurred when the two were preparing to go frog hunting. It happened in the northwestern corner of Greene county, nearly 30 miles from here. Only meager details were received by Sheriff Waldron and other officials and they did not include the name of the grandson.

Snook Listens To Story of Killing

State Calls Witnesses In Rapid Succession As Trial Begins.

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 2. (AP)—Dr. James H. Snook lay back in his canvas chair today, almost out of sight behind counsel table, and listened to the witnesses for the state tell the story of the finding of the body of Theora K. Hix, the girl he is accused of murdering.
In rapid order the prosecution put on three witnesses to build up the narrative of how the young couple's body had been found last June 14 in the New York Central rifle range on the west edge of the city, and one witness who said he saw a man and a woman struggling in the park near where the body was later found.
Dr. Snook submitted this morning to another examination by two physicians before court convened, but defense counsel would not indicate the purpose of the examination.

Will Welcome Festival Guests

Fly Fly Again

Mrs. Mary Pierce, above, is going to start across the Atlantic again on the Graf Zeppelin. But now her husband, Henry J. Pierce, wealthy New York broker, won't have to worry like he did when she flew aboard the giant dirigible on its unsuccessful voyage last spring. He's going to fly with her! The Zeppelin was reported to have postponed its start for America one day so that the Pierces, racing from Russia to Friedrichshafen, Germany, could make the trip.

Governor Joins In Plans Looking To Fete Success

Accepts Legion Invitation and Will Be Host To Visiting Notables.

APPRECIATE COMING

Executive's Action Warmly Applauded By People of County.

Declaring Governor Parnell's attitude an entirely unselfish one and expressing sincere appreciation of his hearty co-operation with civic bodies of this city in an effort to make the Fourth annual Watermelon Festival a success, local post of the American Legion, through Wynn E. Denty, announces that the state's chief executive will be official host on Festival Day to visiting notables from this and other states.

"Governor Parnell," Mr. Denty said, "has accorded us every possible aid and has expressed not only a willingness but a desire to assist in making this Festival peer of them all. He gladly agreed to join in extending invitations to governors of sister states and to members of sister states and to men prominent in public and private life, stipulating only that he be one of and with us for that date and do his bit for the greater glory of Arkansas."

Leslie Huddleston post of the American Legion, in charge of this year's Festival, is duly appreciative of this hearty accord, believing it to be entirely sincere and trusts that Governor Parnell will derive as much pleasure from the occasion as we will know through having him with us.

Mr. Denty further stated that Festival plans are proceeding with out a hitch and is of the opinion that Wednesday night preceding Festival date will find everything in readiness, not one last-minute item overlooked or left to chance.

One among the unique sights in the city that day, Mr. Denty says, will be watermelons exhibited in every show window in town, splendid cooperation by local business men assuring this unique feature. Some of the melons will be large, others larger and perhaps another the largest—but they will be there to convince the world that Queen Geraldine's empire is Watermelon Land.

The Hangman's Noose Exacts Society's Toll

SAN QUENTIN, Cal., Aug. 2.—(AP)—Russell St. Clair Beitzel died on the gallows today for the murder in Los Angeles of Miss Barbara Mangiar, 19-year-old common law wife.

The trap was sprung at 10:40 this morning and 14 minutes he was pronounced dead. Death came from strangulation, as his neck was not broken.

Plenty Charges Against This Man

Motorcycle Cop Hhrt and Alleged Speeder Has Plenty of Court.

FAETTEVILLE, Aug. 2.—(AP)—Four charges were filed against Fred Williams today, growing out of a fan automobile accident yesterday in which patrolman W. E. Hand was injured.

The charges were for speeding, reckless driving, aggravated assault and failure to stop after an accident and were filed by city attorney Rumbold.
Witnesses said Hand was hurt when his motorcycle and Williams' car crashed into each other as the officer was chasing Williams.
Hand was seriously cut about the head, face and side.

More city pavement in 1929, and improved sanitary conditions in the alleys and business back-yards.

Support the Chamber of Commerce.

State

Continued progress on the state highway program.

Fearless tax reform, and a more efficient government through the budget system of expenditures.

Free Arkansas from the cattle tick.

A Watermelon Association

THE value of an established brand was never so cleverly proven as at the beginning of the present watermelon season when buyers were paying record prices for the Hempstead county product.

Owing to the national advertising obtained through the Festival, and their superior flavor, the Hope melons commanded an immediate market. This is an advantage which should be capitalized. Where a market is guaranteed, agriculture is one of the most successful industries in the world—and it is entirely possible for the watermelon growers of Hempstead county to guarantee themselves a market every year.

What is needed is an association, preferably an organization without officers or dues, whose members simply agree on a certain standard of appearance and quality for all melons shipped out under their association name.

One suggestion that has come to The Star is, that a paid inspector be employed during the melon shipping season, his salary to be furnished by a one-cent stamp placed on each melon. Certainly the premium and the guarantee of a market would make it worth while for the growers to pay this additional penny.

We would go even further and place an inspector at every shipping point for melons in the southwestern counties. They enjoy the use of Hope's name at market time—they should be given the opportunity of conforming to a fixed standard.

It would not be mandatory to pay the additional penny, but farmers selling outside the organization would soon be forced into it. The world is so accustomed to standard brands that it looks for one even among watermelons—and is suspicious when it doesn't find one.

The Star suggests that immediately after this year's Festival the watermelon growers of the county take stock of the season's profits, and hold a public meeting to discuss forming a growers' association. There is a world of copy-right material in the literature and pictures which the Festival has used in its four annual events—and which ought to be conserved for the benefit of this section. The growers' association would be the logical organization to do that.

Home Rule for the Cities

THE American Legion post at Morrilton was contemplating a Sunday picture show. The post commander, wanting to know the law, wrote the State Attorney General. His reply, undecided in the main, contained the following paragraph as printed in the Morrilton Democrat:

"Section 2736 of Crawford & Moses' Digest provides that every person who labors or compels his employees to perform other services than customary household duties of daily necessity, comfort or charity, on conviction thereof shall be fined one dollar for each separate offense."

The law is preposterous, of course. It was written before the day of automobiles, when the stage was "legitimate" and there were no movies—and virtually no golfers.

It had for its purpose the establishment of a day of rest; but its framers never dreamed that in the complex civilization of a later day it would ever be used to prohibit innocent recreation.

There were men in Colonial days, of course, who thought it a crime to ride horseback on Sunday. They were the sort who would prohibit the driving of automobiles on Sunday in this modern age—but fortunately they were recognized as fanatics then, as they would be now.

Under the spirit of the Arkansas Blue Law it is a crime to drive on Sunday, because one can not do so without depending on garage and filling station service; it is a crime to play golf, if one employs caddies—and a crime to attend a picture show, because two or three persons may be required to assist in the entertainment.

Yet, ours is a mobile civilization which demands automobiles on Sunday as well as other days, which seeks the out-doors for recreation—and whose theatrical entertainment no longer employs the stage players which the Blue Law was designed to give rest to.

The law is ancient, false and universally defied. There is nothing wrong about that. If a bad law is not repealed it will be disobeyed.

What is most needed in Arkansas today is a courageous revision of many statutes chief among them the Sunday Blue Law. Regulation of the Sabbath was from the earliest days of the American Colonies placed in the hands of the town council. And it was enforced. What the people of a certain locality vote for, they will stand up for. But an edict from Little Rock regulating the life and habits of the cities of Arkansas—scattered from the foothills of the Ozarks to the oil counties in the south, including diverse and contentious populations—is not strong enough to encourage enforcement.

What Arkansas needs is more home rule for her cities. This newspaper stands for that, in the management of utilities, in the administration of city finance—and in the regulation of the Sabbath.

WASHINGTON LETTER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

WASHINGTON.—The way to learn the secrets of being a great statesman is to watch some of them in action.

One of the most important secrets appear to be the art of saying something important that can be taken either way—something on an important issue which each opposing faction can construe favorably in its own fashion and which will permit everyone to love the speaker as much as ever.

The benefits of this secret of statesmanship are obvious enough. It enables the statesman to say something whenever his silence becomes embarrassing and it enables him to appear to have taken a definite attitude on the issue without putting his foot some place whence it can't be extricated.

In the last couple of years there have been at least three conspicuous examples of this sort of thing.

Coolidge puzzled 'em. "I do not choose to run," said Calvin Coolidge, and right up to convention time, eight months later, politicians were still arguing about what he meant. Each one had placed his own interpretation on it. There were those who said Coolidge had definitely courted himself out and those who insisted that he had left the door wide open for his nomination. To this day no one knows definitely whether or not Coolidge made that statement with the pious hope that he would be renominated without having to "run" for the honors.

Then Mr. Hoover, a candidate, upon the definite suggestion of spoke of prohibition as an "experimental modification of laws. The favorable dry reaction thrills at the thought of co-operation in enforcement from the states. All of which fails to indicate whether Wickersham meant "modification" in the accepted sense and whether he would continue to have the federal agents raid speakeasies in states which would be perfectly content with them.

ment, noble in purpose." He had to say something and that was what he said. To this day the wets are getting comfort from his use of the word "experimental" and the dries still dwell fondly on the word "noble." Incidentally, Mr. Hoover also referred to "grave abuses" in connection with enforcement, failing to explain whether he meant that the prohibition laws had been abused by bootleggers and scofflaws or by the prohibition enforcers themselves. And no one today can find any definite evidence as to whether Mr. Hoover is satisfied to have the prohibition laws kept in the statutes as is.

Now we come to the third case, which is that of the Hon. George W. Wickersham, chairman of Hoover's National Commission on Law Observance and Enforcement. In his letter to Governor Roosevelt, which was read at the governor's conference, he said:

"If the national government were to attend to preventing importation, manufacture and shipment in interstate commerce of intoxicants, the states undertaking internal police regulation to prevent sale, saloons, speakeasies, and so forth, the national and state laws might be modified so as to become reasonable enforceable, and one great source of demoralizing and perniciously profitable crime removed."

Because of that statement some dries have demanded Wickersham's resignation, some dries have confessed themselves confused as to his meaning and some dries have yelled "Hokey!" Some wets are enthusiastic and others remain unimpressed. And Mr. Wickersham refuses to elucidate.

The hopeful wet reaction centers upon the definite suggestion of spoke of prohibition as an "experimental modification of laws. The favorable

Admiral Magruder has got his old job in the navy back after being laid off for two years because he criticized a few things in the department. Wish we could get a nice vacation that easily.

While Mr. Mellon was fixing up our money why didn't he think of issuing a new $1.98 bill? It would have been so handy during the summer bargain sales.

We will not believe the country is getting back to normalcy until the stories of trans-Atlantic flights begin to be carried on page 2.

Amazonian Torch Slayer Says Feels At Peace In Jail

TOULOU, Ill., Aug. 1.—(AP)—A "Luminox" of real life settled her score with all the men who mistreated her by choking to death her common-law husband and burning his body. She likes her jail cell here because in it "at least I have nothing to fear."
"Men are all pigs—except my father; he is the only honorable man I ever knew," she said. The girl's father is a prosperous retired farmer of the rich Fox river valley.
Kitselman, Laura declared, often was drunk, abused her, threatening to expose her life to her relatives when she determined to leave him. While Kitselman slept she wound his belt around his neck, "punching new holes so I could draw it tight." The girl drove 50 miles before she burned the body.
"I suppose because I am big and powerful people think I'm not like other women; craving tenderness and contentment," sighed Laura.

When she was 16, the Weaver girl said three men dragged her into a deserted house.
"I wandered around for hours ashamed to go home. Shortly after I went to Peoria. I had to live—and people laughed at a big girl. They didn't have any jobs for me. "Some men were good to me for a time—but they all eventually treated me cruelly. Will Kitselman came along two years ago and we went to live over a gambling house. He was alternately good and cruel to me."

Saskatchewan Pool Boosts Price of Eggs

REGINA, Saskatchewan, Aug. 1.—(AP)—Eggs to the number of 1,498,183 dozen, having a cash value of $400,000, were marketed through the Saskatchewan Egg and Poultry Pool last year. The average price paid was the highest ever returned to the producer by the pool, Mrs. John Holmes, president, says.

She believes that removal of the dumping duty on eggs, permitting American eggs to come into the province freely, might seriously affect egg prices.

NOOKS AND SIDES By Henry L. Farrell

DID YOU KNOW THAT—

Walter Miller, the Cleveland collegian, has beaten the Athletics three times already this season—And Phipps, the Yank star, started three games against the Indians—And was knocked out of the box three times—Lew Fonseca and Bibb Falk, who are crushing the ball for Cleveland, are room-mates on the road—They say Bots Nikola, the college sensation, will become a swell pitcher for the Yanks—But the base runners are fooling him—Bill Carey and the Garden millionaires are going to bat with the New York Boxing Commission on the ban against Schmeling—And will use the German against Sharkey in Chicago, Detroit, Boston or Canada.

that Loughran is just the lad to take Herr Max Schmeling, who seems to be the pet candidate of the experts for the empty crown.

Schmeling came into a great reputation by knocking out Johnny Risko and beating up Paulino. But those two victims were all washed up.

Both Paulino and Risko were softened up by the huge Godfrey and they were only blundering, floundering fighters in their best day who could do nothing but take it.

Likes 'Em Come In
Loughran is the type of fighter who is at his best when his man comes in to him and Schmeling is that type of fighter.

Jimmy Braddock can hit just as hard with his right hand as Schmeling can and Loughran made a sucker out of Braddock in their recent fight.

Braddock, it must be admitted is a slow thinker, but we haven't much evidence that Schmeling is an unusually smart fighter.

The Idle Squire
Sharkey will be in there, of course, but the idle life of a country squire will not do him any good. And every one knows that he is not a smart fighter. And if there is anything that Loughran is, it's smart.

Identified as burglars, James and Walter Maxson of Liverpool confessed they had hidden $7,500 worth of jewelry in a new-made grave.

When St. Louis Flyers Landed

Looking as fresh as if they had just returned from a short auto ride, Dale Jackson and Forest O'Brine, pilots of the record-breaking endurance plane, the St. Louis Robin, are shown here as they landed after more than two weeks in the air. They are standing beside their ship, Jackson on the left and O'Brine on the right. A crowd of thousands greeted the flyers when they descended at Lambert Field, St. Louis, after far surpassing all previous endurance records by remaining aloft 420 hours, 21 minutes and 30 seconds.

'Forbidden Country' Is Center of Russo-Chinese Argument

By William R. Kuhns

NEW YORK, Aug. 2.—(AP)—Manchuria, the "Forbidden Country," is the center of the current dispute between Soviet Russia and nationalist China.

Since the Manchu emperors moved their gilded court from Mukden to Peiping in 1944, Manchuria has been a meeting place and battleground between east and west—China and Russia.

For more than 100 years, until the middle of the eighteenth century, Chinese were not allowed to enter the country of the Manchus except a few sent now and then from Peiping to gather wild ginseng and falcon feathers.

When this prohibition was relaxed, Chinese emigrants swarmed into Manchuria with the result that 90 per cent of the population today is Chinese.

The reminder are descendants of the original Manchu and Tungus tribes. The northern cities furnishing a refuge for thousands of Russian commercial agents representing the present government in Moscow, have given cities like Harbin a distinctly Russian atmosphere.

Early in the thirteenth century the Mongolian Genghis Khan dreamed of world empire and brought Manchuria under his sway. In 1260, Kublai, grandson of Genghis, was elected great khan to rule over most of Asia.

For 400 years the power of the Asiatic rulers was sufficient to prevent any important movement of European Russians across Siberia.

Beginning with the seventeenth century, the history of Manchuria is filled with accounts of military clashes between Russian and Chinese along the Amur river, the northern boundary of Manchuria.

Russia required the maritime provinces and Vladivostok, which gave her access to the Pacific. Russian far eastern policy gained steadily in strength and aggressiveness.

The treaty of Shimonoseki between Japan and China gave Russia a chance to obtain an important railway concession across north Manchuria and a lease on Kwantung province, with railroad rights, for 25 years.

The Russians built the Chinese Eastern railway from Manchuria to Vladivostok, as the far eastern division of the trans-Siberian railroad.

In 1924 Russia effected an agreement with the Chinese authorities for joint Sino-Russian administration.

This agreement is the center of the present difficulty. China says she was justified in seizing the railroad, claiming Russia violated this agreement in several ways. Russia denies this charge.

Corillions Once More Make Music

Rebuilt After Sleeping In Rusty Silence for 50 Years.

LISBON, Aug. 2.—(AP)—The celebrated corillions of Mafra, which have slept in rusty peace for nearly 50 years, once more are making glorious music which can be heard 10 miles.

These great double sets of chimes, born of the caprice of a megalomaniac king, are said to be the finest in the world, and were made in 1730 by Nicolas Levasche, who planned the Fortimont carillon in Belgium, and William Witholeck.

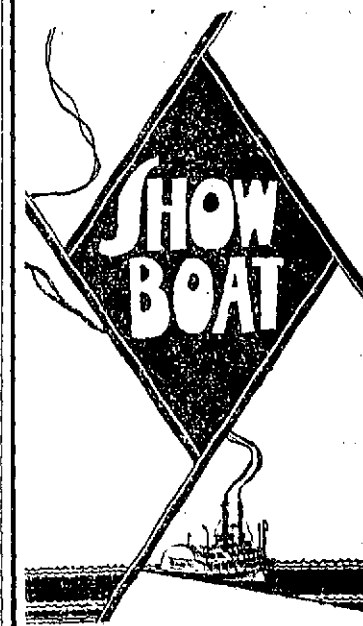

King John V of Portugal, who strove to copy his cousin Louis XV of France in pomp and lavish splendor, built the enormous marble monastery of Mafra, the biggest pile in Portugal.

It occupies an area of 40,000 square meters, and everything within is proportionately huge. There are 4,500 doors and windows and 880 great rooms or salons.

The peculiarity of the duplicate sets forming the carillon is due to the vanity of the Portuguese king, who tradition has it, when told with bated breath that a set of chimes such as he wanted would cost no less than 1,500,000 "cruzados," answered carelessly, "I did not think it would be so cheap. I will have two sets made."

The bells, after nearly two centuries spent in delighting courts and country side with continual music, fell suddenly silent. Something went wrong with the instrument by which they are played, and for more than two score years rust has gathered and the chimes were forgotten.

Williams-Wow-Wow Bout Termed By Fans As Season's First Killing Frost

Main Bout, Booked As A Whiz, Proves To Be Petting Party, Each Battler Fearful of Hitting His Opponent Too Hard.

That particularly disagreeable odor so noticeable around the Rink last night was the effluvia of a putrid prize fight; the noise you heard was a crowd of fans rearing back and loudly, with one accord, yelling "rotten."

There have been a few decidedly off-color performances staged here but none quite so rank as the main bout last night between "Red" Williams and Chief Wow-Wow. They were ticketed to go ten frames, but after each had fallen down a couple of times and bruised tender skin, Red got pushed over and stayed pushed. Funny thing about was the blow that knocked him out missed him by four inches.

Wow-Wow was also accommodated, permitting himself to be pushed over an equal number of times with his opponent. It seemed to be rather a game, one saying "pushed you over last time; now you push me." The verdict of the fans who stayed to see the farce through—many left in utter disgust—was practically unanimous. It is given in the first paragraph above.

Now in the national restoration work undertaken by the dictatorship it was resolved they must be saved. The repaired chimes are a novel and overwhelming attraction to a generation which scarcely knew of their existence. The deserted village of Mafra is festively preparing for crowds of visitors; closed inns are opening their doors.

J. F. Baskin of Rice Lake, Wis., offered $100 reward for information leading to arrest and conviction of the person who has been cutting off the tails of the Baskin cows.

Johnny Celmar and Jimmie Carter, fighting a ten-round semi-final, gave the fans an enjoyable show. They were on for a fight, realized it, didn't pull any shenanigans, and their event was all that saved the evening from being a complete flop.

Preliminaries were good, keeping a fair-sized crowd in good humor up to the fatal fifth in the final. Then—but why dwell on disagreeable things.

Following the storm of protest over last night's show, it is deemed unlikely that there will be any further glove contests staged here.

Moonshine Money

an indication that bootlegging in southwest Arkansas has reached such a point of stability that it is followed by the men as a pastime, but turned over to the women as labor.

Women in this section, since pioneers first pushed through the jungles from Georgia to stake out rich valley farms on the banks of the rivers, have worked side by side with their "men folks" in the fields. They have chopped cotton raked hay and tended the family garden.

Wife Distributes Whisky
Now that bootlegging in some parts of the county has taken the place of farming to a great extent, they seem still to be laboring side by side with their husbands and sons in gathering not cotton but the money of those who want liquid refreshment.

In mid summer there is little to be done to the cotton crop except incessant plowing. This is done by the men who stay in the fields from morning until night. Stills, of course, can be tended after night-fall, but when business is good, transporting liquor often consumes both night and day. The wife takes the family automobile, bought on the profits of the trade, and sets forth to carry out the distribution end of the business while the husband sits near the still, built in an outhouse on the farm and does off for a few winks of sleep between "runs."

Bootlegging is a substantial business in Miller county, and it has been since its beginning back in 1919. Of course their had been bootlegging before, but 1919 marked the time when the liquor traffic began to fill a definite economic need in the county. Post-war cotton prices, combined with disastrous floods, impoverished the farmers of the Red river valley, especially the tenant farmers.

Many went to the nearby oil fields at El Dorado, there to use their teams and wagons in hauling timbers and piping to the newly discovered oil fields. Many of these came back to tell tales of riotous living, wide open saloons, painted women, terrible corn whisky that sold for as much as $15 a quart, big wages and free spenders. Several Miller county bootleggers and distillers decided to divert this stream of black gold into Miller county and thereby bring about their own farm relief.

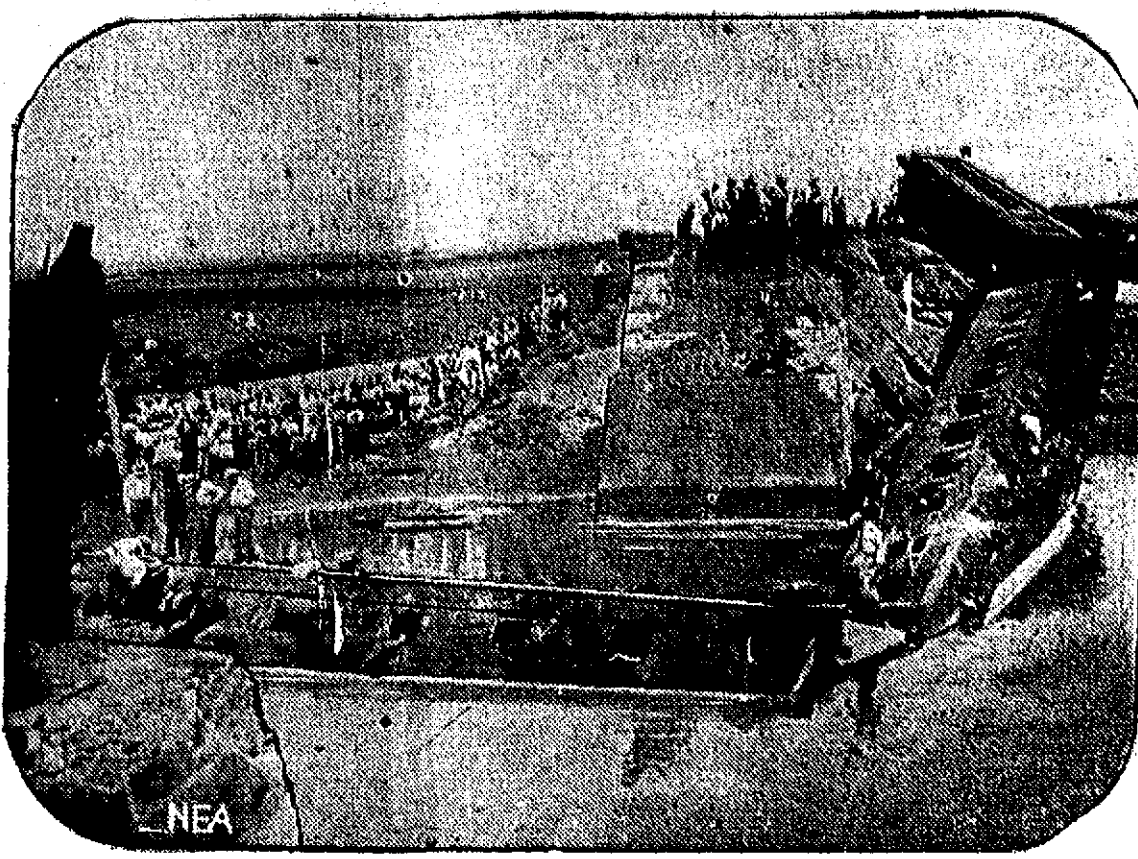

Stills Multiplied
The industry got a start and it is only necessary to ask any man on the street in Texarkana if it has flourished. If Ecovro is the rum capital of the United States, Miller county has become the rum capital of the Southwest.

Individual distillers multiplied almost overnight in the swamp lands of the southern part of the county, admirably suited geographically for the business. Among the cypress knees of almost every island in the middle of the many shallow, muddy lakes of the county, a still was set going.

Then some master economist of the liquor trade conceived the idea of standardizing the output of the county's stills. Products of a number of small manufacturers were gathered together and marketed by one organization. Small competitors, who refused to join the combine, were undersold and the result was that the price of corn whisky in Miller county on a cash and carry basis dropped from about $20 a gallon to as low as $7.

The combine prospered at this

Where Nine Died in Colorado Train Wreck

Heavy rains and a swollen stream undermined a railroad bridge near Stratton, Colo. The bridge gave away as a Rock Island railroad express was speeding over it; one Pullman car dropped into the river and two others tumbled haphazardly along the bank, and nine people were killed. This shows a view of the wreck, with rescuers getting bodies out of the half-submerged car in the foreground, where the fatalities occurred.

price, and huge distilling plants were built in the side of sandy knolls. They were complete in every detail, with floors of concrete, pots and tubs and worms of copper.

Competition Restored
But they did business only a short time. Even though they were carefully concealed underground, they were too conspicuous. The natives talked of the shiny copper and the thousands of gallons of mash, and prohibition officers heard.

The two or three big plants in the county were rug from the ground, and those parts not destroyed on the spot were carried away to enlarge the pile behind the county jail. These drives netted very few real operators, only an unlucky negro or two who had been hired at a price far above the average to keep the fires going.

So business returned to the normal. Competition was restored and the fame of "Garland City Pride" spread for miles around. Favored bootleggers in Shreveport and El Dorado, Pine Bluff and Camden, cities in Arkansas, made weekly trips to the swamps to bring back loads of corn whisky.

Their patrons learned the difference, or at least thought they did, and when the weekly load did not arrive, because of bad roads, went grumbling back to their homes to see if there weren't a few drops yet in the charred keg bought a month ago.

The product is marketed for the most part in charred kegs of ten gallon capacity. The burnt interior of the liquor specialists say, removes the impurities, such as fusel oil, and improves the taste. Those wanting smaller quantities were satisfied with a quart or half-gallon fruit jars. Every buyer, it seems was a booster. The fame spread still further until one heard frequently the name of Garland City at carnival parties in Dallas and Little Rock.

Bomb Syndicate Found In Chicago

Police Arrest Twelve and Believe Gang Is Broken.

CHICAGO, Aug. 1. (AP)—A bomb syndicate, supplying "pineapples" in Chicago and other cities for several years, was believed crushed today with the jailing of 12 of the alleged ring leaders and the arrest of others expected.

The arrests were made in a spectacular raid on the gang's headquarters and were made possible through the activities of an under-cover man who has been associated with the gang for three months. He had brought a bomb for use in another city and thus wormed his way into the confidence of the bomb peddlers.
